Scorpion freezes Hanzo. Bi-Han regains consciousness. Soon, Hanzo arrives at the outskirts of the village and finds the corpse of half a dozen dead villagers. He runs to his home, only to arrive too late: his wife and only child, Dropping to his knees in emotional agony and despair, Hanzo is caught off-guard as Bi-Han impales him. As he slowly freezes Hanzo, Bi-han mocks Hanzo's wife being inferior, and his family to rot in the afterlife, morgue him. Hanzo is completely submerged in ice and is killed. Shang Tsung approaches Bi-Han, clarifying that the village has been cleared. Suddenly, Bi-Han morphs back to the sorcerer Quan Chi, revealing that the attack on the village in part of the Lin Kuei clan was a ruse. Shang Tsung questions Quan Chi as to how easily Hanzo could be persuaded to fight on their side. Quan Chi notes that Hanzo's honor demands vengeance, and his thirst for revenge should cloud any suspicion. Quan Chi then resurrects Hanzo to fight for the Netherrealm in the Mortal Kombat tournament, and in return, Quan Chi will help him find Sub-Zero and have his revenge. Hanzo emerges from the ice as his eyes turn white and he takes on the name: Scorpion. Scorpion later arrives at the Mortal Kombat tournament as requested and waits for Sub-Zero to arrive. He finally encounters his perceived traitor with the intent of killing him. Too consumed by his revenge, he engages him in combat, refusing to listen to Sub-Zero's claims of deception. The battle ends with Scorpion killing him by using, ironically, Sub-Zero's Spine Rip fatality, and raising Bi-Han head high above his own in victory. Mortal Kombat Legends: Scorpion's Revenge Scorpion, voiced by Patrick Seitz, appears as the protagonist of the 2020 animated film Mortal Kombat Legends: Scorpion's Revenge. Like most of his counterparts in other media, Scorpion was originally Hanzo Hasashi, who was killed by Quan Chi in disguise of Sub-Zero, after the sorcerer masacring the Shirai Ryu clan, including Hanzo's wife Harumi and their son, Satoshi. After his death, Hazon became the wraith Scorpion and entered the Mortal Kombat Tournament in seek of revenge. After Sub-Zero was killed, Quan Chi revealed to Scorpion it was him who killed Hanzo's family. In the ensuing fight, Scorpion finally killed Quan Chi, avenging the deaths of Satoshi, Harumi and the Shirai Ryu.
